

CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS VOLUME

Chris BAKER

taught Asian history and politics at Cambridge University before coming to reside in Thailand in 1979. With Pasuk Phongpaichit, he has written numerous books on Thailand, including the Cambridge A History of Thailand. Together they translated into English and edited the Siamese epic The Tale of Khun Chang Khun Phaen.

Simon James BYTHEWAY

is an associate professor in financial history at the College of Commerce and Graduate School of Business Administration of Nihon University, Tokyo, and the author of over 20 articles in both Japanese and English. He holds a doctorate from Tohoku Gakuin University in Sendai. His research interests concern Japan's economic development and financial history from the nineteenth century to the present.

CHARIT Tingsabadh is acting director of the Centre for European Studies at Chulalongkorn University, where he taught at the Faculty of Economics from 1975 to 2009. His specializations include environmental and natural resource economics, and "technopreneurship" and innovation management.

Michael W. CHARNEY

is Reader in Southeast Asian and Imperial history at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. His research focuses mainly on early modern warfare, the cold war in Southeast Asia and the intellectual history of pre-colonial Burma. He is currently researching a book on the history of railways in South Asia, Southeast Asia, and Africa.

M. L. CHITTAWADI Chitrabongs

is a lecturer at the Faculty of Architecture, Chulalongkorn University, and holds master's and doctoral degrees from the Architectural Association (AA), London, in architectural history and theory. She has presented papers at the University of Bath's Death, Dying and Disposal Conference, at the AA's Size and Scale Seminar and at the National Museum Volunteers' Symposium of 2011, "500 years: Europeans in Siam" in Bangkok; and has published "The politics of dressing up" in AA Files 60.

Lia GENOVESE

holds a master's degree from the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, where she is a doctoral candidate. She was part of an APSARA archaeological excavation of an ancient iron smelting site in Siem Reap province, Cambodia in 2010. In 2011, at the Asia Research Institute in Singapore, she presented her fieldwork on "The vanishing heritage of the Plain of Jars of Laos".

Michio HASHIZUME

hold a doctorate from Kyoto University and is a professor at the Department of Geology, Faculty of Science, Chulalongkorn University, Thailand.

Elizabeth Howard MOORE

is Reader in Southeast Asian history of art and archaeology at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. Her recent publications include The Pyu Landscape: Collected Articles (Department of Archaeology, Nanyang University), "Unexpected spaces at the Shwedagon Pagoda, Myanmar" (in A Companion to Asian Art and Architecture, Blackwell Publishing, 2011) and Early Landscapes of Myanmar (River Books, Bangkok 2007).

Toshihiko IYEMORI holds a doctorate from Kyoto University and is a professor at the Data Analysis Center for Geomagnetism and Space Magnetism, Graduate School of Science, Kyoto University, Japan.

KANNIKAR Satraproong

holds a doctorate from Leiden University in the Netherlands. Currently an independent scholar, she lectured at the Institute of Language and Culture for Rural Development, Mahidol University, from 1994 to 2005. Her publications include A True Hero, King Chulalongkorn of Siam's Visit to Singapore and Java in 1871 and Rajadhiraja Samkok and Saihan: World Views of the Thai Elites. Her focal interest is how civic religion is reflected in contemporary Thai novels.

THAW KAUNG

is an authority in library and information studies and the preservation of traditional palm-leaf and paper manuscripts. He retired as the Chief Librarian of the Universities Central Library and Professor of Library and Information Studies, University of Yangon. He is a member of the Myanmar Historical Commission and a Corresponding Member of the Siam Society.

YEE YEE KHIN

is a lecturer at the Myanmar Department, University of Yangon. She holds a doctorate from the University of Yangon. Her book Yodaya Naing Mawgun (Letwe Nawrahta) was published in Myanmar in 2011 by the Tun Foundation, which awarded her its Literary Prize for bringing to light and editing the rare, lost manuscript text and for her full exegesis and annotations.

Paul A. LAVY

is an assistant professor in South and Southeast Asian art history and Graduate Director at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. He specializes in the art history of Cambodia, Thailand and Vietnam, with a research focus on Pre-Angkorian sculpture.

MONTIRA Rato

obtained her doctorate in modern Vietnamese literature at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. She is a lecturer in Vietnamese at the Department of Eastern Languages, Faculty of Arts, Chulalongkorn University, and is deputy director for academic affairs at the Institute of Asian Studies there. Her publications include chapters and articles on Vietnamese language, literature and culture.

Niels MULDER

has retired to the Philippines where he wrote his field biography (Doing Java, Kanisius Publishing House, 2006; Doing Thailand and Professional Stranger, White Lotus Press, 2008 and 2009). Earlier, he worked on the Southeast Asian life world (his Inside series) and the culture of the public world (Images series). Currently, he reflects on the "Third Age; on getting old and older still. He may be contacted at <mailto:niels_mulder201935@yahoo.com.ph>.

SOE THUZAR MYINT

earned a BSc degree in Botany and MSc in environmental studies from Yangon University; and an MA in Thai studies from Chulalongkorn University. She is a staff member of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Myanmar in Yangon.

NITHIWATTHN Choosakul

holds a doctorate from Kyoto University and is a lecturer at the Department of Physics, Faculty of Science and Technology, Rajamangala University of Technology, Thanyaburi, Thailand.

Masahito NOSE

holds a doctorate from Kyoto University and is a research associate at the Data Analysis Center for Geomagnetism and Space Magnetism, Graduate School of Science, Kyoto University, Japan.

Yoko ODAGI

is a research assistant at the Data Analysis Center for Geomagnetism and Space Magnetism, Graduate School of Science, Kyoto University, Japan.

PATCHARAWALAI Wongboonsin is an associate professor and the director of the Human Development and Migration Studies Centre, College of Population Studies, Chulalongkorn University. She is also on the advisory board of the Centre of European Studies at Chulalongkorn.

PATTANA Kitiarsa

is an assistant professor at the department of Southeast Asia Studies, National University of Singapore. His main research interests include Thai Buddhism, popular religion and culture, and transnational labor migration. He has edited the book Religious Commodifications in Asia (Routledge, 2007) and authored Monks, Mediums, and Amulets: Thai Popular Buddhism Today (Silkworm and U. of Washington Press, forthcoming).

PHASOOK Indrawooth

is a professor in historical archaeology at the Department of Archaeology, Faculty of Archaeology, Silpakorn University, Bangkok.

Sophie QUINN-JUDGE

is an associate professor of history at Temple University in Philadelphia, USA, as well as Associate Director of Temple's Center for Vietnamese Philosophy, Culture and Society. She is the author of Ho Chi Minh: The Missing Years and co-editor, with Odd Arne Westad, of The Third Indochina War. She is currently working on a manuscript on The Elusive Third Way: The Search for a Political Solution to the Vietnam War.

Paul REEVE

is a postgraduate student at the University of Queensland and an independent researcher who specializes in the history of Phnom Penh.

Nicolas REVIRE

is a doctoral candidate at the Université la Sorbonne Nouvelle–Paris 3. He has been lecturer in French language at the Faculty of Liberal Arts, Thammasat University since 2003 and guest lecturer at Silpakorn University and Mahachulalongkorn Buddhist University, Thailand. He is co-editor of a prospective publication of the Siam Society, on new insights into the art and archeology of pre-modern Thailand, Laos, Cambodia and Burma.

Marco RONCARATI

holds a doctorate from the University of London, has written books and contributed to academic journals, and has lectured at several universities. He has spent many years studying traditional Chinese healing arts and maintains practice. For the last seven years he has been a staff member of UNESCAP working on health and other issues of socio-economic development.

Amable SABLON DU CORAIL

is a graduate of École des Chartes and was attached to the archives of the Ministry of Defense at Chateau de Vincennes, in charge of private papers and oral history. He is now at the Ministry of Culture, in charge of ministerial and presidential records. He is author of Louis XI ou le joueur inquiet.

Akinori SAITO

holds a doctorate from Kyoto University and is a research associate at the Department of Earth and Planetary Science, Graduate School of Science, Kyoto University, Japan.

SARITPONG Khunsong

is a lecturer at the Department of Archaeology, Faculty of Archaeology, Silpakorn University, in Bangkok, where he is a doctoral candidate in historical archaeology.

Michael SMITHIES

was twice editor of Journal of the Siam Society (1969–1971 and 2003–2009) and is writer/editor of several current Society publication projects. After an academic career in Southeast Asia from 1960, he retired in 1992 from the United Nations in Bangkok. Among his recent publications is Witnesses to a Revolution: Siam 1688 (Siam Society, 2004). He was made Chevalier de l'Ordre des Arts et des Lettres by the French government in 2006.

Donald A. STADTNER

was for many years an associate professor of art history at the University of Texas, Austin, after receiving his doctorate from the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of Ancient Pagan: A Buddhist Plain of Merit (2005), Sacred Sites of Burma: Myth and Folklore in an Evolving Spiritual Realm (2011; reviewed in this volume of JSS) and numerous articles.

Martin STUART-FOX

is Professor Emeritus of the School of History, Philosophy, Religion and Classics of the University of Queensland, Australia. He is author of seven books on Laos, including the Cambridge History of Laos, of which Thai and Japanese translations have recently been published.

SURAPOL Natapintu

is an associate professor in prehistoric archaeology at the Department of Archaeology, Faculty of Archaeology, Silpakorn University in Bangkok.

Toshitaka TSUDA

is same as for Hashizume, p. 347 at the Research Institute for a Sustainable Humanosphere, Kyoto University, Japan.

TULAYA Pornpiriyakulchai

has been Corporate Director of Marketing and Communications at Dusit International. Her focal interest is her campaign, “Wisdom Beyond Borders”, aimed at enhancing appreciation of the traditional wisdom in proverbs through contemporary art. The exhibition “Thai Folk Wisdom” and related book that she co-authored have been acclaimed in Thailand. She is developing a similar project in Indonesia and expects to produce her second book in 2013.

Edward VAN ROY

is a visiting research fellow at the Department of History and a visiting fellow at the Institute of Asian Studies, Chulalongkorn University. He has written articles on Bangkok's Portuguese, Lao, Mon and Chinese communities and on the rise and fall of Bangkok's mandala structure (Journal of Asian Studies, 2011), and the book Sampheng: Bangkok's Chinatown Inside Out.

Iwamoto YOSHITERU

is author of 18 books and has collaborated in writing and producing hundreds of other publications. His interests span an eclectic range of topics in the social sciences, on account of which he is regarded as something of a “living encyclopedia” in Japan. He is affiliated with Tohoku Gakuin University as Emeritus Professor of economic history.