

EDITORIAL

This issue is the conclusion of Volume 20, which seems to dragging along over a number of 4 years starting in March 1961. It is, therefore, the duty of the present editors to review the work of their efforts. Actually the first issue of this Volume was finished under the good hand of the former editor, Gunnar Seidenfaden.

As the previous Volumes (18 and 19) of the Bulletin are lean and are self-contained ones. We have decided to follow the international basis of scientific periodicals in having the present Volume of 4 issues, containing some 335 pages.

Improvements have been achieved especially in the last 2 issues, e.g. the letter type and the minimum of printing errors. This is a credit to the printer. We are hoping to carry on with this working standard and trying our best to better up still.

It seems to be too ambitious to state here that we are aspiring to accelerate our efforts in issuing two numbers a year instead of one as usual. More contributions to the Natural History of Thailand or Southeast Asia are thus expected from our members and colleagues.

Editors.
